

Overview of Employment-Based Placements

What is an employment-based field placement?

An employment-based placement is an internship at your place of employment where there are designated hours for your internship separate from your hours of employment. The placement must offer different learning opportunities, and also a different supervisor who is designated for field learning purposes only. Field education is a fundamental component of social work education; it provides the opportunity to integrate classroom knowledge and practice. It is very important that an employment-based placement not be viewed as a job but as a learning experience providing a setting for the acquisition of knowledge and skills and a professional social work identity. A placement arranged in the student's employing organization is the exception rather than the norm. Employment-based placements allow students to complete a required internship while remaining employed.

What is the process for getting an employment-based placement approved?

These placements are approved when it is determined that new knowledge and skills can be achieved in the student's workplace. Arrangement and approval of employment-based placements require the participation of the student/employee, job supervisor, an agency administrator, potential field instructor and the field education department. Extra attention is necessary to assure that the planned placement meets all of the school's requirements and learning objectives and does not duplicate current job tasks and responsibilities.

The student/employee must be allowed the time and opportunity to become involved in discrete learning activities with specific learning objectives, which are related to the school's learning objectives. Structural changes will likely be necessary to protect the learning environment from employment demands. For example, a student may be an employee for two days and a student for three days. The student must have a qualified LICSW field instructor who meets all of the criteria of the school and is not the student's current supervisor.

Who can serve as a Field Instructor?

The field instructor must have an LICSW, and must have completed (or be willing to register for) the Seminar in Field Instruction (SIFI) supervision seminar offered by the School. They must also agree to supervise the student for two hours a week and review weekly process recordings, complete evaluations, and participate in field visits. The Field Instructor cannot be the student's job supervisor. If the agency does not have a qualified field instructor on staff they may look to other qualified social workers associated with the agency such as contract staff, volunteers, or board members. If an off-site supervisor is selected, the student should have an on-site task supervisor who, again, is not the supervisor for the employment portion of the experience.

What are the benefits of an employment-based placement?

Because the student/employee already knows and is oriented to the agency, the learning curve may not be as steep at the start of placement. The student /employee brings new learning back to the agency from the school which can enhance agency practice. The agency demonstrates commitment to professional development and retains a quality employee and protects its investment in the employee.

What are the challenges of an employment-based placement?

It can be difficult to maintain the separation of student and employee roles. It can be challenging for the student, and fellow staff, to navigate the shifting roles the student/employee occupies. A disruption in a student's job may also disrupt placement and vice versa.

What are the optimal conditions for an employment-based placement?

The most successful employment-based placements are in agencies that are supportive of social work education and workforce development, and large enough to accommodate the student's/employee's current job and a different setting for their placement. employment-based placements work best when the agency is committed to retaining the student and the student has been employed in the agency for a significant length of time (preferably more than 2 years) and has demonstrated a commitment to the agency.

APPLICATION INFORMATION FOR EMPLOYMENT-BASED FIELD PLACEMENT AGENCY AGREEMENT AY'2022-2023

Application Process

Students must meet with a member of the Field Faculty during the placement process to discuss the feasibility of an employment-based Field Placement. Once discussed, the student will email the completed application to their Field Faculty Member by the due dates outlined. Students should include a copy of the proposed Field Instructor's resume with the application. Or, students should request the proposed Field Instructor email the resume directly to the student's Field Faculty Member.

Application Checklist

Before proceeding, students must review the following checklist for eligibility.

- Students must be in both good academic standing and with the employing organization. The student should not be a probationary employee or the subject of disciplinary action within the agency.
 - The identified Field Instructor must be an *LICSW who is not currently the employee supervisor for the student and has not previously supervised the student. The Field Instructor must complete and submit the field instructor profile online.
 - *On occasion, if an LICSW is not available, other licenses may be considered if approved by the Field Department. Discuss with your Field Faculty Member in advance of submitting the application.
- The Field Instructor must agree to provide 2 hours of individual supervision each week. The field instruction must have an educational focus and incorporate process recordings as a learning tool. At minimum, 1 ½ hours of this time should be individual supervision, the balance can be provided by task supervisors or group supervision.
- The Field Instructor is strongly recommended to attend an Orientation offered by the Simmons University School of Social Work in early August. If not previously completed, the Field Instructor must also participate in a Seminar in Field instruction \(SIFI\) series during the 2022 -2023 academic year and download and review the Simmons Campus Based Field Education Manual.
- The student must be assigned to a different department or program from student's job and have the opportunity to gain knowledge and skills in new methods, modalities, interventions, and populations. The student cannot provide the same services to the same clients that they are serving in the role of employee and the role of intern during the internship.

5. The student's educational goals should be the primary focus of the internship position.
6. Only one employment-based field placement is allowed unless the student is a participant in an approved Simmons Educational partnership or has had prior approval from the field department.

EMPLOYMENT-BASED FIELD PLACEMENT AGENCY AGREEMENT (To be reviewed and signed by all parties)

We have discussed the use of (Agency and Department/Unit) _____ for (Student/Employee)
_____ as a Simmons School of Social Work field placement site during the 2022-2023 academic year. We agree that it is a feasible plan for this student/employee to complete an employment-based field placement. The student will be released from regular work duties for 24-hrs/week, September-May (or 16-hrs/week; September-August, if approved) to fully attend to the internship. The student's internship time will focus on learning, not on the work demands of the agency. The field Instructor/supervisor will be allowed adequate time to: attend to the student's supervision; attend the Orientation to Field Instruction at Simmons University School of Social Work; attend a Seminar in Field Instruction series (if needed); and other internship-related matters. The School's expectations can be met within this agency (for details, please refer to the attached Policy for employment-based Field Placement and the Field Education Manual.)
